2016 JAN 1 (VerticalNews) -- By a News Reporter-Staff News Editor at Energy Weekly News -- Investigators discuss new findings in Energy Research. According to news reporting originating from Hong Kong, People's Republic of China, by VerticalNews correspondents, research stated, "This paper presents a combined daylight, airflow network and building energy simulation of a Public Rental Housing (PRH) development in Hong Kong to fulfil the requirement of the local green building guidance. The numerical modelling results are partly validated by on-site measurements during the period with the highest monthly average outdoor temperature."

Our news editors obtained a quote from the research from Hong Kong Polytechnic University, "Different ventilation control strategies are simulated to optimize natural ventilation performance. The simulation results show that the full-day ventilation strategy contributes to a lower average and peak indoor temperatures compared to the non-ventilation and night-ventilation scenarios. The indoor operative temperature of a worst-case vacant flat lies under the upper 80% acceptability limits in ASHRAE 55 during 67.5% of the modelled period in July. On the other side, at least 95.6% of the habitable area in the case buildings is predicted to experience a higher average daylight factor of 1% compared with the local green building guidance."

According to the news editors, the research concluded: "Furthermore, the energy saving potential of the combined natural ventilation and daylight strategies is anticipated to be 51.9% for air-conditioning and 8.3% for lighting compared to a baseline building, respectively."

Troubleshooting

Q: Can I search for everything that are available in the databases subscribed by the library?

A: FIND@HKUL is a tool for discovering indexed information, it does not guarantee access to all full text articles retrieved.

In fact, full text accessibility depends on a number of contributing factors such as subscription coverage, source of the article, and occasional changes to the subscription platform and configuration on the vendor's side.

In many cases, the external changes are beyond the Libraries' knowledge and control.

Troubleshooting

Q: Can I have remote access to the ebooks and online articles subscribed by other local university libraries via Find@HKUL?

A: No. Remote access to non-HKUL electronic resources is restricted to the eligible users of the hosting libraries due to licensing agreement. Access to these electronic resources may be available within those libraries. You may apply for a JULAC card to visit and use the resources on-site.

Configure to HKUL settings

The image shows a screenshot of the Google Scholar interface with several elements highlighted by red boxes and numbered circles (1-5) to guide the user through configuring library links.

- 1: A red circle highlights the hamburger menu icon in the top left corner of the Google Scholar header.
- 2: A red box highlights the "Library links" option in the left-hand navigation menu.
- 3: A red box highlights the search input field where "HKU" has been typed.
- 4: A red box highlights the checkbox next to "The University of Hong Kong - View It@HKUL", which is checked.
- 5: A red box highlights the "Save" button at the bottom right of the settings page.

1. Go to Settings

2. Choose Library Links

3. Search for "HKU"

4. Choose "The University of Hong Kong - View It @HKUL"

5. Save

Social ties and health: The benefits of social integration
TE Seeman - Annals of epidemiology, 1996 - Elsevier

This article explores the relationship between level of social integration and various aspects of health. A search of the literature published since the mid-1970s (under the MEDLINE key words, "social ties", "social network", "social isolation", "social environment") presented strong evidence that social integration leads to reduced mortality risks, and to a better state of mental health. The evidence on physical health outcomes is less conclusive. There is no consistent evidence that social integration affects the incidence of disease (at least for ...
